

Duncan Taylor Peerless
(distilled at Glenrothes)
1969 41 year old

44.2%

Immediately you can tell this is a complex, old, mature whisky — that hint of rancio is there, but there's more of a beeswax character than on the Adelphi bottling (below), along with the peachiness that often appears in old drams. This is balanced by light coconut, even a hint of grist. The waxiness seen on the nose allows it to cling to the tongue, while the fruits become jellied. Benefits from a drop of water, allowing lemon and vanilla to show. £210

—Vol. 20, #4

