Very Singleton of Dufftown: while that means easy drinking and approachable, it also can suggest a single malt without a spark of wayward genius. This is, typically, very ordered: nuts and honey with malt and pecan pie underneath. As it opens there's dried lemon, oak, dried fig, and (dilute) pencil shavings. The palate is—typically—sweet and thick, though here with a refreshing sharpness, like a mix of wine gums and cider. I'd add a rock or two of ice. (Travel Retail exclusive) £38/1
