

Benromach Tokaji Finish

45%

A very peculiar whisky. It's interesting in some respects, with the thick, sweet Hungarian dessert wine fighting with damp peat smoke for attention. But it tastes a little disjointed, and a bit too youthful. With a few more years aging (before finishing in the Tokaji wine), the flavors should integrate and mature better. But as it is, this whisky is still "work in progress."

—Vol. 16, #1

