

The Macallan 50 year old

43%

Amber-chestnut color. Aromas are very mature and so thick, one almost needs a knife to cut it.

Notes of dried fruit (orange, lemons, pineapple) and wood spices (especially clove), with more than a suggestion of peat smoke. Thick, enveloping texture—like a warm coat on a bitterly cold day. Very mature. One can easily deduce this is a very old whisky—the woodiness is evident on the palate. But it is not in excess.

There's plenty of dried fruit, enticing wood spices, and peat to keep the palate entertained, all the way through to its very long, dry finish.

—Vol. 9, #3

